UNITED NATIONS
INFORMATION CENTRES

UNITED NATIONS
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INFORMATION
UNITED NATIONS INFORMATION CENTRES/
SERVICES AND UNITED NATIONS OFFICES

“The United Nations cannot achieve the purposes for which it has been created unless the peoples of the world are fully informed of its aims and activities.” In 1946 the first United Nations General Assembly established the Department of Public Information and set out the general guidelines for its activities. By one of these guidelines, “branch offices” were established in order to ensure that people in all parts of the world receive as full information as possible about the United Nations.

Today these branch offices—United Nations Information Centres (UNICs), United Nations Information Services in Geneva, Vienna and at the Regional Commissions, as well as United Nations Offices (UNOs)—carry out the mandate of the General Assembly.

The Information Centres are a unique source for UN documents, reports and public information materials, including complete coverage of the proceedings of UN conferences; sessions of the General Assembly; Security Council; Economic and Social Council; and other UN bodies dealing with such issues as peacekeeping, peace-making, human rights, disarmament, economic and social development, environment, disaster relief, refugees and election monitoring.

Information Centres assist press and broadcast media in their respective countries in disseminating news about the United Nations. Archival footage, broadcast-quality audio tapes and photographs are available upon request. UNICs arrange press conferences and panel discussions for UN officials and experts. UNICs staff respond to requests from non-governmental organizations and educational institutions for speakers and documentation on the work of the United Nations. They make available press releases and news-oriented information kits, periodicals and books. These include Africa Recovery, the UN Chronicle and the Yearbook of the United Nations. In some countries Information Centres also produce newsletters in local languages and post information materials on their websites. Many centres have an auditorium where film/video screenings are arranged for groups of students and where workshops and seminars are held for the NGO and academic community.

UNICS (continued)

UNICs are linked to UN headquarters electronically to remain abreast of the latest information on United Nations involvement in global affairs. Many centres also maintain their own websites in local languages, as appropriate. For further information about the United Nations Information Centres, contact the Information Centres Service, Room S-1060 A, United Nations, New York NY 10017, USA, telephone +1-212/963 7216, fax +1-212/963 7330, website (www.un.org/aroundworld/unics/home.htm).
